FULL GRAIN LEATHERS

Full grain leathers are obtained from selected coats and have a light protective layer on the surface that preserves and protects their natural beauty. The presence of signs such as scratches, differences in grain, wrinkles, veins and differences in colour shades are proof of how genuine the leather is. This type of leather has an extraordinarily natural and silky feel.

NATURAL FABRICS

Natural textiles are recognisable by their undisputed elegance and refinement, which is typical of the precious fibres from which they are made. They come from both the world of plants (as in the case of cotton, linen, hemp, jute, ramie, agave, coconut, raffia) and the animal kingdom (with a wide choice of different types of wool and silk). Naturally more delicate than synthetics, natural fabrics are distinguished by their distinctive feel and their characteristic interweaving, which further enhances the design of the product they cover.

SYNTHETIC FABRICS

Synthetic fibres are known for their great versatility and practicality, both in terms of appearance and material.

They do not crease and have a high resistance to scratches as well as ultraviolet and infrared rays. Also, they do not develop a peeling effect and some products are water-repellent, stain-resistant and often also odour/mite-proof. What's more is that they do not even need to be ironed.

These features ensure a great fit and make them particularly suitable for homes where life never stops.

MICROFIBRE

Microfibre are materials of extraordinary quality and great versatility, both in terms of appearance and material. Their main characteristic is their typically smooth and shiny finish. Unlike synthetic fabrics to which they belong, microfibre do not crease and have a high resistance to scratches as well as ultraviolet and infrared rays. They do not develop a peeling effect and some products are water repellent, stain-resistant and often also odour-free proof. They do not need to be ironed. Their fineness ensures a great fit and makes them particularly suitable for homes where the floor stands tall.

OUTDOOR FABRICS

Outdoor fabrics are known for their durability and resistance to changing weather conditions and usage. The outdoor coverings selected by Calia Italia boast eco-sustainability certifications (they are made from recycled yarns, contain no toxic substances harmful to humans, and the production processes do not release toxic substances into groundwater). These fabrics are also washable, stain-resistant, antibacterial, breathable, mold-resistant, UV-resistant, and fire-proof.
